Thursday, June 12

9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. .................................................. Post-Convention Field Trip to Greater New Orleans HSDRRS Areas led by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers
Following Hurricanes Katrina and Rita in 2005, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was authorized and funded to design and construct the $14.6 billion Hurricane and Storm Damage Risk Reduction System (HSDRRS) for southeast Louisiana.

Over the past eight years, the Corps strengthened and improved virtually all of the levees, floodwalls, gated structures, and pump stations that form the 133-mile Greater New Orleans perimeter system as well as approximately 70 miles of interior defense structures. The new system includes the largest surge barrier of its kind in the world (IHNC-Lake Borgne), and the largest drainage pump station in the world (GIWW-West Closure Complex) among its technically-advanced engineering feats. On August 29, 2012, the seventh anniversary of Hurricane Katrina, the entire system performed exactly as designed during Hurricane Isaac.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will provide an overview of delivering the Corps number one domestic priority; a system that is capable of defending against a 100-year level storm surge, or a storm that has a 1-percent chance of occurring in any given year. While risks of a larger storm are inherent with living in this region, the HSDRRS now provides the greater New Orleans area with the strongest and most resilient levels of risk reduction in the area’s long and storied history.

Post-Convention Field Trip

Following the devastation of Hurricane Katrina, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was authorized by Congress to construct a system that would defend the greater New Orleans area against a 100-year level storm surge. The result of this effort is known as greater New Orleans Hurricane and Storm Damage Risk Reduction System (HSDRRS); a 133-mile perimeter system consisting of a combination of earthen levees, robust floodwalls, and massive closure structures and pumping stations. This tour will provide the opportunity to visit some of the major features that comprise the system, such as:

Permanent Canal Closures and Pumps (PCCP) and Interim Closure Structures (ICS) which provide protection to the three main outfall canals (17th St., Orleans Ave., and London Ave.) in New Orleans which serve as drainage conduits for much of the city. The PCCP are currently under construction and are the final major complexes required to provide the area with a sustainable and permanent risk reduction system. Until construction is complete, the 100-year level of risk reduction is being provided by three interim control structures. These ICS have been operated successfully in four named-storm events since construction in 2006.

The Inner Harbor Navigation Canal-Lake Borgne surge Barrier (IHNC-Lake Borgne) which is a 1.8 mile-long surge barrier located at the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway and Mississippi River Gulf Outlet and helps protect New Orleans East, one of the areas greatly affected by Hurricane Katrina.
